

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

17 March 2010

Book early for the Society of Editors and Proofreaders 2010 conference

Make the most of the early bird discount and book your place at the Society of Editors and Proofreaders (SfEP) 2010 conference before the end of March.

The conference is themed 'Succeeding through innovation' and aims to help you to drive your career forward. The highly successful 'Something for everyone' sessions, introduced last year, will be continued; Trevor Dolby, head of Preface Publishing, will deliver the Whitcombe Lecture; and the roles and tasks of modern proofreaders and copy editors will continue to be discussed in detail.

All SfEP members and associates booking and paying in full before Wednesday 31 March 2010 can take advantage of a discount of about 10%: £40 off £395 for residents and £15 off £160 per day for non-residents. The same discounts apply for non-members, who are always welcome.

This year's conference offers more value for money than ever before. The full residential member fee has remained the same since 2007 and all other fees have remained the same since 2008. In addition, we are offering a free pre-conference city tour and networking opportunity.

The SfEP 2010 conference will be held at University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, from Saturday 4 to Monday 6 September. The venue has been set in the north and we look forward to meeting those who cannot so easily attend the more southern venues.

Everyone enjoys the opportunity to meet and train with other editorial professionals at the SfEP conference, so why wait to book? Save money with the early bird discount, which closes on Wednesday 31 March.
